NOTE: The following photographs were taken using a hand-held iPhone 7 using natural light sometimes augmented with a single 150W flood lamp. The photos capture the Deats/Thatcher collection in the manner in which they were found, except for some small adjustments from separating bunched pieces on cabinet shelves or in drawers. We assume that the arranged display of these artifacts mostly reflect the intent of the named originators, but recognize that they have been previously handled and perhaps augmented by former HCHS agents for public display at other locations. Many artifacts depicted below in the Library collection have been recently relocated to the River Road facility as a result of professional cataloguing and archiving.

Robenhausen Site Collection | Milwaukee Public Museum
www.mpm.edu/robenhausen-site/site-and-col...

Site and Collection. During the 1860s, the site of Robenhausen was discovered in the winter of 1853-54 by a farmer named Jakob Messkommer. As a farmer, ...

Robenhausen

a Neolithic pile settlement with an area of about 10,000 sq m near the village of the same name on Lake Pfäffikersee in northern Switzerland. The first excavations were conducted in 1857. The settlement was built on piles along the shore of the ancient lake and was connected to the shore by a bridge.

Many objects made from wood, bone, and horn have been found in Robenhausen, including a door of a hut, a dugout, an oar, a bow, arrows, daggers, axes, and end scrapers. The remains of nets, plummet, and buoys, as well as pottery, have also been found. These finds mostly date from the Cortellood and Michelberg cultures. The inhabitants of Robenhausen primarily engaged in livestock raising, including the raising of cattle, sheep, goats, and pigs. The livestock was kept within the settlement.
