

Geographic map showing the location of NASA JPL GPS stations (778 worldwide from 1989 to 2005), equipotential map of vertical plate motions (using a triangulated integrated network (TIN) surface), 174 known terrestrial impact sites (buffered based on crater dimension), and select North America plate stage poles as summarized for DNAG (Klitgord and Shouten, 1986).